OFF 12 YEAR DEBT

"Go-getter; Mortgage Is Paid in Full

The members and friends of the Antioch Methodist Episcopal church have reason to rejoice this week. The debt of 12 years standing is paid in full. The original amount, incurred in 1926 when the parsonage was remodeled, has been reduced little by little each year. Last fall the new minister, Rev. Warren C. Henslee, made the statement that before the year was over the local congregation would befree of the mortgage. In February he asked permission of the official board to raise the money. The pastor got the "green light" on his proposal, and he labored most diligently until April 3 when the victory was cele-

The debt, including interest, amounted to $357. The remaining $235.65 was applied to the church budget which was in arrears.

At the victory service last Sunday morning the pastor extended sincere thanks to everyone who helped to make the drive a success. While he was very happy to receive the funds, to pay off the indebtedness, he declared the co-operation of the people meant vastly more to him than the actual money. The members give full credit to Rev. Henslee who solicited and collected all of the money himself -a personal service that gives the congregation a church free from debt.

What's The Answer? On January 4, 1935, President Roosevelt stood in Another year has passed. The federal government has not quit "this relief

Law Against Spare Tires

The present tax law which penalizes, through the undistributed profits tax, a conservative and thrifty industry for building up a reserve against hard times is like a law taxing an automobile driver for carrying a spare tire to insure uninterrupted operation.

A taxation or legislative policy which discourages and destroys industry, gradually sets the stage for advocates of state socialism to claim that private enterprise has broken down and that government must step in and operate the affairs of its citizens.

It seems fantastic that such a program is being deliberately promoted here. But that idea is growing in the minds of persons who have watched the current world trend to submerge the individual under government dictation, and the increasing drive to constantly inject government into business, and into the affairs of private citizens in our own country. * * * * *

A Hot Time in the Old Town

Washington started the month with TVA gas on the stomach, but it is now a serious case of acute indigestion, plus complications that may result in uncovering scandals in handling public monies.

Chamberlain government to his side, now has a covetous eye on little Czechoslovakia-the one real democracy remaining in central Europe. The Czechs have a government very similar to ours.

He apparently won't find the going easy, howeverthe Czechoslovakian government has announced it will fight the Nazis to the last man, and has embarked on as ambitious a military expansion program as it can afford. It has France on its side. Thus, little by little, the cntentes of the "next world war" are forming.

tions get in the doghouse so far as the consumer is concerned. The consumer mistakenly believes that these groups are attempting to force the price of farm products to the highest possible level.

Some co-ops may try this-but they are in the minority, and they are doomed to fail. The big far-sighted cooperatives know as well as anyone that you can't inflate prices unreasonably, without narrowing and destroying your market. What these co-ops are trying to do is to bring to the farmer a "living price" for what he raises-a price that will pay expenses, and return him some profit for his labor and his investment. And at the same time, they are trying to lower the cost of distribution, which is as important to the consumer as to the Agricultural marketing cooperation doesn't mean exploiting buyers. It means a balanced price, which is fair and attractive to all involved.

There is no question but the New Dealers do things in a big way. Just look at the national debt for instance.

Political and economic forecasters tell us that the administration is now giving business another breathing spell. This will also afford opportunity for the New Hitler, who has conquered Austria and won the Dealers to draw up blue prints for the next strangling.

He had filled the gasoline tank in the engine and was rinsing his hands in the fcy brook water when he heard a footstep on the bridge and looked up to see Deborah approaching. He stood up and dried his hands on his handkerchief. She came to stand a little above him on the raised plank, looking down at him. To his surprise, the strain of yesterday had not set a greater coldness toward him in her dark eyes. She was smiling a little at him now, her lips curving. She was smiling at him, and Grandmother was not watching. He stared at her.

"I followed you because I want to talk to you, if you don't mind," she

"Why, of course I don't mind. Is there something I can do?" She hesitated. When he looked up, the long lashes had dropped and lay close to her cheek. She began to examine the moss, too, "I'm not a very nice person," she said at last. I apologized once before for being so difficult, but I don't think I tried any harder not to be difficult. I mean it, this time. You were awfully thoughtful, last night, when Grandmother was so queer and afraid. You do love her, don't you? You're quite honest about it? You would do anything to spare her puin?"

CHAPTER I.—Bryn (James Brynildson III), a tail bronzed young man of wealth, and his chum, Tubby Forbes, are discussing Bryn's coming marriage. Tubby is opposed to the match, believing it ascheme to get Bryn's wealth from him. Should the girl, Deborah, whom Bryn had met at the office of his attorney, Ted Holworthy, marry Stuart Graham before her twenty-first birthday, she will inherit a vast fortune from her grandfather. Stuart had greatly displeased Deborah, who refuses to marry him. Bryn, posing as an unemployed engineer, offers to marry Deborah, as Stuart, for $50,000, they not live as man and wife. Twenty-three years previous Anne Larned had eloped with an adventurer on the day set for her was killed in an accident. The Larneds grandparents, took the child with them to Oregon where, without child companions, Deborah grew up. To safegrandparents, took the child with them to Oregon where, without child companions, Deborah grew up. To safegrandparents, took the child with them to Oregon where, without child companions, Deborah graw up. To safegrandparents, took the child with them to live on the family, but a market crash left scarcely enough for them to live on. This was unknown to Deborah's grandfather and bean set aside to keep the family, but a market crash left scarcely enough for them to live on. This was unknown to Deborah's grandfather, an invalid, Gary, a servant, managing the finances. At twenty, the thought of marriage greatly frightens Deborah. It had been planned that Deborah maned stuart in Frisco, where they were to be married.

Her puint?

She nodded, "I can see that. I don't think I quite believed it until yesterday afternoon, when you came home again, and last night, when you them end in the time, and last night, when you the test them to live she time, and leat him in the time, and last night, when you there so troubled. "Bryn." "Yes. D . . . Deborah."

"Grandmother is in a strange state of mind. Last night I was very worried. I went into her room to tuck her up and kiss her good-night. She looked up at me directly and asked me if I were happy. She hasn't asked me be- ! fore. Not in the same way. I think she began to suspect everybody, even

"Did you tell her you were happy?" "Yes. But . . . she's going to be watching very closely for proof." She stopped. The color began to rise under her white skin. Bryn watched it, bewitched. Her eyes were lowered. "What . . . what are we going to do about it?" he asked, lost.

"Happy with you," Deborah explained, as if he did not understand, "Does she think I'm in love with you?"

"Yes," Deborah replied, and flushed violently. "You're a much better actor than I am. I'm sure she's beginning to suspect me."

"When you go out the door," Bryn explained, "I stand and look after you. And when I hear you coming I go to meet you. And when you're talking I keep looking at you, and when you're away I talk to her about you. I tell her how beautiful you are, how much more beautiful than any girl I ever knew, with those lovely eyes, and your lashes, as long as a dream, and your mouth, and your little white chin, and the way you blush . . . and your throat, so soft and white, and the way you move your shoulders, and the color of your hair, and the way it curls."

He drew a deep breath.

"Oh, dear," she sighed. "No wonder she thinks I'm not in love with ! you. I haven't told her once anything about you, I've hardly mentioned you.". "Well," Bryn sald after a moment, "I'll tell you. When you're in love, Deborah, you hate to be away from your . . . from your sweetheart for a second. Everything she does is perfect and lovely and sweet. You want to lift her in your arms and hold her tight against you, so close that you can hear her heart beating. You want to hear her say that she'll never leave you again, no matter what happens, that she doesn't care anything about anybody else in the world but you. And if it happened that she didn't love you," Bryn went on slowly, "there'd be a sick empty feeling where your heart ought to be, and you'd wish you were a kid again, so you could cry. But if she did love you, and she knew you weren't sure about her, she'd put her arms around you, and put her cheek against yours, and maybe even . . kiss you."

Deborah was staring at him. After a moment she said breathlessly, "Is that the way you love your . . . your own girl?"

"Yes, Deborah." "I don't know anything about that way of loving," she said at last. "I couldn't pretend that to Grandmother." "No." Bryn said.

"It wasn't so much what I ought to say to Grandmother, anyway," she said. "I hadn't really thought of talking to her about you. It was the way I ought to act. I was wondering

"Yes?" "It's really Gary's idea," she said hastlly. "He came to me about it this morning. He's afraid Grandmother might get to wondering about us. You see, she thinks we . . . we love each other the way other people do when they're married," she explained. "I suspected as much," Bryn sald

Wouldn't you dislike that?" "What I was trying to tell you when I first started to talk," she reminded him, "is that it's too late for me to keep thinking what I like and what I don't."

CHAPTER VII

"If this isn't heaven," Sally sighed, looking about her in supreme "then don't bother to tell me I'm not dead. I don't want to be disturbed."

She sat on the cool grass in the wavering shadow of the tree against whose smooth trunk Deborah was leaning. The leaves overhead rustled softly in the faint noonday breeze. Nothing else anywhere in the whole pleasant picture spread before them moved under the white sunlight. They had congregated, all six of them, on the highest corner of the sloping lawn, the orchard behind them, a smooth stretch of sward unrolling down to the stone walls below, broken only by the bright flame of a bed of wallflowers half-way down the slope.

"Me, too," Simon muttered. He lay stretched out in the grass, his pipe in his mouth, his head on Sally's knee.

Bryn sighed. He shifted his position and moved a few inches closer to Deborah. He turned on his stomach propped himself on his elbows and gazed up at her. A few days ago, before these others had come, and after she and Bryn had decided to be friends. she would have smiled down at him a little. It was fun to smile at Bryn, once one had started. He always looked as if he liked being smiled at. But now. Deborah pretended not to know that he was looking at her, and regarded steadily the hills far away. Because Madeline was here now, and Madeline might not like it.

A mist came into her eyes, as she thought of Madeline, and the hills swam in a noonday fog. Poor Madeline wasn't happy, for all her pretense at light-heartedness, Deborah told herself. How could she be happy, seeing Bryn married, actually married, to another girl, a girl who wore a wedding ring that he had given her, who had taken his name? Bryn was lovely. Even with Madeline here, he hadn't changed his attitude to Deborah a bit, He acted exactly as If they really were married, really loved each other, and he didn't try to keep Madeline from

That night, as usual, Deborah went Into Grandmother's room to make sure that she was settled comfortably, and to kiss her good-night. Grandmother was sitting up in her big bed, her silvery hair brushed smooth and drawn back into a neat little braid.

"Deborah." "Yes, Grandmother?" "Do you not like these friends of Bryn's, my darling?"

Deborah looked up in surprise. "Why, yes. Yes, of course. I think they are lovely. Sally is sweet. She is like a talking doll. And she is very kind." "And Madeline?"

"Nobody could help liking Madeline," Deborah replied, "She's charming, isn't she, Grandmother? I love to hear her talk. It's so slow and lazy. It's because she and Simon are from Texas, Sally says. And Madeline is beautiful. Don't you think she's beautiful, Grand-

"Not as beautiful as you are, my child," Grandmother answered fondly, "But she is very attractive." She was silent again. Then, "If you like them, Deborah, and find them pleasant company, what is it that has been troubling you ever since they arrived?" "Troubling me?" Deborah answered, startled. "But . . . I am not troubled." "Oh, Deborah," Grandmother sald reproachfully. Deborah raised her eyes, and there was a deep, happy smile in them. "I am happy, Grandmother darling," she said.

"And you love Bryn? He loves you, of that I am sure. But of your love for him . . . sometimes I am not so sure. You admire him? You think him strong and thoughtful and quick, and kind?" "Yes, Grandmother."

"You respect him? You are proud of whatever he does?"

"Yes, Grandmother." "And," she put her hand out gently and lifted Deborah's chin. "Why, you are blushing, child! Surely that ought to be sufficient answer to my next question, but I must have your words, Deborah, Forgive me. But you know your complete happiness means everything to me. Deborah, tell me; when you see him, and he smiles that twinkling smile of his, don't you want to go to him, and caress his cheek, as you are caressing mine, and put your hand on his hair, and touch his shoulder? Isn't that what you'd like to do, Deborah?"

Deborah caught her breath. Her eyes darkened. Her lips quivered faintly. And then, "Yes, Grandmother,"

"Of course," Grandmother said happlly. "Well, then you love him, You couldn't help loving him. Go, my child. Kiss me good-night, and leave me. I shall rest, tonight. I am happy."

Out in the hall, safely away from the door, Deborah stood and put both her hands over her face. Her brain was whirling. There was a dreadful lump in her throat, and something ached in her breast. Alone in the darkness, she stood, trying to calm herself, trying to be cool and uncaring again.

A voice spoke to her. It was Bryn. He was in the hall beside her. He was whispering, so as not to disturb Grandmother.

"Deborah," he was saying anxiously, "Deboruh, what has happened?"

Deborah did not answer. Instead, she dropped her hands and stared up through the shadows at his face. He drew a quick breath, then put his arms out and held her close to him. His coat was rough under her check.

"Deborah, sweetheart," he said brokenly, "what's happened to you? Why are you trembling?"

For only a second she lay there, and then she lifted her head and pulled herself away, "Don't touch me," she said in a furious whisper. "Oh, don't you dare to touch me!" and she flew down ting talking in the welcome darkness of the veranda.

Deborah sat on the couch before the long balcony window in her own sit ting room. The afternoon was very hot, Bryn and Tubby and Simon had gone following the brook, looking for a pool to swim in.

There was a knock at her door, Deborah ran quick fingers over her eyes. Her heart bumped. She scrambled from the couch, preparing to dash into her bedroom before calling out to Bryn that he might go through to his own room. It was not Bryn. Sally's voice floated plaintively through the keyhole. "Deborah! May we come in?" "Oh," Deborah sald limply, and then, Yes, of course, Sally. Please do. And she tightened her dressing gown around her.

Sally, in floating black chiffon pyjamas and tiny black mules, came through the door, followed by Mudeline In dull green, "Were you sleeping?" Sally inquired. "Curl yourself up again. Deborah. Everything about you is like the Sleeping Beauty herself," Sally Deborah looked at Sally. "I think you're sweet, too, Sally," she said shyly. Sally flew up from her chair, flung her arms around Deborah and kissed her, "That was darling," she said. "Wasn't that darling, Madeline?"

Madeline sighed, "Yes," she agreed. "But you don't need it. You've got Simon. You don't have to suffer in silence and alone, as I do."

Sally began to laugh. "You don't exactly go around languishing, you know, idiot," she said. Madeline sighed. "Not outwardly, perhaps. But inwardly, I suffer." "Piffle," Sally answered. She turned to Deborah, "Does she look as if she were suffering?"

"Not exactly," Deborah said faintly. "She isn't, either. She knows perfectly well it's all a question of time. And, I must say, Madeline, it looks much more hopeful lately than it ever did. Doesn't it?"

Deborah couldn't stand it any longer. "Does she mean she's . . . in love . with somebody?" she asked faintly. "Tubby," Sally answered, "Can you imagine It?"

"Tubby?" "Tubby. Isn't it ridiculous?"

"I don't see anything ridiculous about it," Madeline objected. "He may not be what one would call a romantic figure, I admit. He is a number of pounds overweight, but he's very goodtempered. And his hair won't lie flat: but I always liked originality. And I like his dimple and I'm crazy about his lisp. I could listen to him forever. if only he'd say a few of the right things. Deborah, honestly now, don't you think Tubby's a dear?" Deborah was still staring at her.

Now she gave a deep sigh and sank back against the couch, "Yes," she said, "Yes, I think he's wonderful, I think he's marvelous. I think he's just as nice as he can be."

CHAPTER VIII

It had been a happy afternoon, the happiest afternoon, Deborah decided, that she had ever known. The four of them, Sally and Simon and she and Bryn, had gone for a walk in the pine woods up on the hill. At first she had walked beside Sally, but Sally had obviously wanted to be with Simon. and Deborah had dropped back and walked with Bryn. He could see how It was, that she wasn't thrusting herself upon him, that it was a matter of necessity, and he didn't seem to mind, As a matter of fact, Deborah said to herself, sitting on the veranda in the twilight, he had seemed to enjoy himself. He had climbed a steep overhanging little cliff once when she had seen a brilliant tiger-lily up in the shadow, and had brought it down to her triumphantly. When he gave it to her their hands had touched, and he had stood for a moment looking down at her with a queer expression that made her heart turn over when she remembered. She had wanted to smile at him then, Deborah recalled, but something had made her draw away hastily, and as she moved, his expression had changed again, and he had begun to talk quickly.

Deborah could not take her eyes from Bryn's. It seemed to her that in his there was a question that she had to answer. She gazed at him, so strong and fine, sitting there against the pillar. A kind of tense look that was constantly in his face during these last few days began to relax. Then he put his hand out slowly and covered hers, lying beside her on the chair.

"No, no," she said in a whisper, but she couldn't draw her hand away, and she didn't know what it was she meant. He lifted her hand gently until it was against his lips; his eyes were still on hers, gentle, compelling. But she was afraid; she drew her hand away swiftly and sprang from her chair. "Isn't that . . . Isn't that the car?" she said breathlessly. It was. Madeline and Tubby had been to town, and when Madeline came up to the veranda Bryn Inquired about mail.

"There was a letter for Tubby from Pilar," Madeline replied.

Sally stopped dead. She looked up at Madeline in horror. "From Pilar?" she repeated. "Who is Pilar?" Deborah inquired.

Sally and Madeline looked at each other. Then they both coughed together. "Just a girl," Madeline said nonchalantly, but Sally at the same moment said, "She's a horrible nasty scheming vampire, that's what she is, and I hate her."

"I wouldn't like her." Deborah said positively, and put her chin up. Simon raised himself on his arms and called down to them through the the stairs and out to the others, sit- twilight, "Hi," he said, "what about the other mail?"

"There's more. Tubby's got it," Madeline explained. "In his pocket, He's coming across the bridge now. I can hear his delicate footsteps."

Tubby came around the end of the house. His face was very red. He was not smiling. He was almost frowning. Madeline glanced significantly at Sally, who compressed her lips and stared at her brother. Tubby stopped beside the steps, only a few feet in front of Deborah, so that as he took the letters from his inner coat pocket she could easily see them. Idly, as he called out name, she glanced at each envelope. . . .

"Simon," he announced. "Nothing for you, Bryn. Sally, two for you Nothing at all for you, Deborah, and Madeline had hers in town, Another for you, Simon. And here," he said gallantly, "is a letter for you, Mrs. Larned. It looks very interesting. Written in a bold, dashing, masculine hand, with a very thick enclosure it carries with it a hint of mystery." He had been holding out Simon's last letter, waiting for him to take it, as he spoke; so that Deborah had had a moment to take in the meaning of the handwriting on Grandmother's envelope. It was familiar . . . It was dreadfully familiar. A cold ley hand clutched at her heart, and she felt herself turning faint again, as she had on that dreadful afternoon on the wharf . . . she put out her hand involuntarily for the letter and made a queer little strangled sound. Grandmother was smiling at Tubby's nonsense, waiting for her letter. She did not notice Deborah's face. But Bryndld. He stood up sharply, He saw Deborah's whiteness. He put out his hand and took the letter from Tubby's. He glanced at it. He looked over at Grandmother.

"He could be arrested for this," he told Grandmother grimly. "Interfering with government mails, Bribery and corruption. The crooked game of pol-

Tubby stared at him, his mouth open. "Shut up," Bryn told him, although he had not spoken. "Not a word out of you, you iniquitous scoundrel. Trying to defraud me of my rightful property, indeed. This is my letter. I've been looking for it for weeks, longing for it, not being able to sleep nights. It's a detailed and careful account of the construction of the arch of the bridge over the . . . over the Volga river in Russia. New departure in engineering. I'm sure Grandmother would enjoy reading it, wouldn't she? I suppose this is your idea of a joke. Grandmother, I apologize. I apologize for having such a stupid and crass insect for a friend."

"I was . . . I was just kidding him-Grandmother," Tubby muttered, "It isn't your letter after all. It's his."

"Oh, dear," Grandmother murmured, laughing. "You two keep me in a perfect state of bewilderment. I don't suppose I shall ever be able to tell. whether you are talking sense or nonsense."

"Tubby's fault," Bryn answered, thrusting the letter into his pocket, "Tubby's an awful ass, Grandmother. You have no idea."

"He's all right," Simon explained. "He smells the dinner. We're going to have duck and watercress."

Deborah stood tensely before the window, hands locked together, walting for Bryn to come downstairs after taking Grandmother up to bed. Tonight of all nights, Grandmother had stayed up half an hopr later, and all the time Stuart Graham's letter, filled with all sorts of unimaginable possibilities, lay unopened in Bryn's pocket.

Bryn came in quickly and shut the door behind him. Deborah broke away from Madeline's arm. She took a step toward him. She put her hand out mutely.

His eyes were upon her face. He compressed his lips. His hand went to an inner pocket, and then he said, quietly, "Just a minute, Deborah. Are: you perfectly sure that you're not mistaken?"

"Oh, yes, yes!" she cried, and the air in the room was suddenly electric, as if someone had turned a switch.

Bryn drew the letter out. He looked at it. "I don't like opening other people's letters," he said slowly. "It might be only an extraordinary resemblance, Deborah. You've had it on your mind, you know."

She took it from his hand and looked at it. The very touch of the envelope made her shiver. "I'm sure," she said. Bryn ripped the end off the envelope, and drew out the folded pages. He glanced at Deborah's face. "Shall I read it. Deborah?" She nodded mutely. Bryn straightened the pages and began.

My Dear Mrs. Larned:

Naturally I cannot imagine just what Deborah has told you regarding the failure of our plans in San Francisco, but I am afraid she may not have shown me in a kindly light. For the past month I have been most anxious to write and explain the situation to you but circumstances beyond my control have made it impossible for me to

I suppose it is useless for me to expect that after hearing Deborah's story, whatever it was, and after this long silence on my part, you can have any sympathy for me and the position in which I now find myself. But I must ask you to accept the explanation which I have made in regard to my silence in view of the fact that I am an enlisted man in the navy, completely under the arbitrary control of any whimof my superior officers and subject to the restrictions of anyone on board a ship out of touch with land and such conveniences as mails,

And now for Deborah's story. What she has told you, I do not know, as I mentioned before, but looking at the matter from her point of view, and trying to be just and generous, I am forced to the conclusion that whatever she told you must have been both exaggerated and blased. I was very much disturbed over the whole business, and spent all my shore leave when in San Francisco trying to find her and explain, but of course it was an impossibility to do so. I don't know whether it has occurred to you, Mrs. Larned, to think how completely ignorant of the world and its ways Deborah is. I was prepared, of course, for a certain amount of unsophistication, knowing to some extent how she had been brought up, but I did not realize that any girl could pos-sibly, in this day and age, have remained so entirely unaware of all trends of modern times. I have, of course, every respect for the manners and customs of the time of my parents and grandparents, as I am sure you will know, but having lived a normal life, I have naturally progressed with others of my generation to an acceptance of the manners and customs of the present day. Deborah has not, This was obvious to me on our first meeting, from her appearance and from her absolute inability to meet an ordinary situation with calmness. I grant you that it must have been difficult for her to come down alone to meet me, and perhaps if I had known just how difficult, if I had realized Deborah's state of mind and lack of understanding of modern life as it is lived, I should have been able to overcome her objections and explain away her difficulties. As it was, I could do nothing. Deborah was in a state of frantic terror before I had a chance to see her at all, and by the time I reached her, she was beyond ordinary reasoning, I am bitterly sorry for it all, and reproach myself that I didn't guess what to expect, and so prepare the situation accordingly. It seems to me that I might have been warned, Mrs. Larned, of what I should have been expected to

Even as it was, I might have been able to overcome Deborah's childish ter-rors had it not been for the absolutely inwarranted interference of some unknown person in the lawyer's office. Deborah will probably have mentioned him to you, and made some satisfactory explanation as to her conduct. I was certainly pained and astonished to discover that she had so little good taste as to be willing to take up at once with a stranger. The fact of Mr. Holworthy's presence was all that reconciled me to leaving her, angry as I was. I may add that the time will come when I will make it my business to discover this stranger's identity and settle with him for the insult he ofthe

CHRISTIAN SCIENCE CHURCHES "Unreality" was the subject of the Lesson-Sermon in all Churches of Christ, Scientist, on Sunday,

The Golden Text was, "The world passeth away, and the lust thereof: but he that doeth the will of God abideth for ever" (I John 2:17).

Among the citations which comprised the Lesson-Sermon was the following from the Bible: "Put not your trust in princes, nor in the son of man, in whom there is no help. His breath goeth forth, he returneth to his earth; in that very day his thoughts perish. Happy is he that hath the God of Jacob for his help, whose hope is in the Lord his God" (Psalms 146:3-5).

The Lesson-Sermon also included the following passages from the Christian Science textbook, "Science and Health with Key to the Scriptures," by Mary Baker Eddy: "The true idea of man, as the reflection of the invisible God, is as incomprehensible to the limited senses as is man's infinite Principle. The visible universe and material man are the poor counterfelts of the invisible universe and spiritual man" (p. 337).

Franklin Feted in Paris

When Benjamin Franklin was in Paris in Revolutionary days seeking help for America, he received such ovations as the old Spartan had never dreamed of. Parties were given in his honor, at which the most beautiful women were chosen to embrace him in turn. No man of quality was complete without a ring or a snuff-box with his medallion. "These," he wrote to his daughter, "have made your father's face as well known as that of the moon, so that he durst not do any-thing that would oblige him to run away, as his phiz would discover him wherever he should venture to

I hereby offer a reward of $100 for information leading to the apprehension and conviction of the person fraudulently impersonating me in soliciting so-called "political campaign

The purpose of this offer of reward is twofold: (1) to protect any person from making political contributions to a man who as late as this week represented himself on the telephone to be Congressman Church, thereby obtaining a check, and fraudulently endorsing and cashing same in my name; (2) to urge the cooperation of those approached in apprehending the guilty person with a view to prompt prosecution.

Repeated reports of such fraudulent solicitation drive me to this public offer of reward.

As late as Thursday, March 31st, a man telephoned a leading north side business man stating in effect: "I am Congressman Church, just off the plane from Washington. The Campaign Committee needs more money. I would like to send a man right over for a check. I want to go back to Washington tonight."

Note carefully that I have not been in Illinois since January 1, 1938. Vital legislative business has kept me in Washington. I have of course never authorized the use of my name by any so-called fund raising "campaign committee."

In my twenty years in public office I have always entirely paid my own campaign expense. I have never solicited campaign contributions and have returned every contribution which has been sent me.

Will those who have contributed to this person who is falsely impersonating me write me direct or cooperate with my law partner, Dean Lake Traxler, 10 South LaSalle Street, Chicago, furnishing him with the details?

FINDING OURSELVES IN SERVICE

LESSON TEXT—Mark 8:27-33.

GOLDEN TEXT—"What shall it profit a man, if he shall gain the whole world, and lose his own soul?"—Mark 8:36.

PRIMARY TOPIC—What Peter Found Out Out.
INTERMEDIATE AND SENIOR TOPIC—
Making Life Count Through Service.
YOUNG PEOPLE AND ADULT TOPIC—
Finding the Richest Life Through Service.

"Finding ourselves" seems like a singular, almost self-contradictory. expression, but it refers to a sound principle recognized by psychologists as well as spiritual leaders. As a matter of fact, modern psychology has begun to recognize and use spiritual laws and principles which alone bring about human happiness and efficiency. A word of warning-let no one who studies this lesson fall into the serious error of thinking that some formal religious service will bring redemption and favor with God. We are saved by grace through faith in the Lord Jesus Christ-"not of works, lest any man should boast." It is then by the new birth that we are "created in Christ Jesus unto good works which God hath before ordained that we should walk in them" (Eph. 2:8-10).

It is the Christian who needs to "find himself in service." Only as he thus yields to Christ does he really find the life worth living. The words of Jesus in verse 35 are solemnly and gloriously true.

I. Clear Confession (vv. 27-30) Even those who deny to our Christ the recognition of His deity, and the devotion of life which is His just due, must, if they are at all intelligent, admit that no man ever lived who has made such an impact on human history. Even in the days of his life on earth those who did not accept Him as Christ regarded Him as the resurrected form of one of the nation's greatest leaders. Now unbelieving men speak of Him as the great founder of Christianity, a mighty leader, a wonderful example, or an unequalled teacher. the mass of humanity who may thus | improve livability, growth, pigmentaadmire Him, but who do not count tion, and laying. Purina laying mashes Him as Saviour and Lord. The ques- were stepped up 21/2 times in Vitamin tion comes to us as it did to the A content by the addition of Puratene, disciples, "Whom say ye that I "Thou art the Christ"-this alone suffices as the foundation for Christian testimony and conduct.

II. Corrected Error (vv. 31-33). Although Jesus was not yet ready to have His Messiahship proclaimed to the public, He was prepared to teach His disciples concerning not only that important truth, but of His rejection and death. "He began to teach them that the Son of man must suffer . . . be rejected . . . killed and . . . rise again."

Note the divine "must." While it is true that wicked men showed their hostility toward our God and His Christ by hanging Him on Calvary's cross, yet it was to die for our sins that He came into the world. The cross has rightly come to represent God's love to the world rather than man's hostility to God.

Error now asserts itself, and strangely enough it is the very one who had the clearest grasp of the truth regarding the Messiahship of Christ and boldly expressed it who now objects to the revelation of the coming death and resurrection of Christ, and lends his voice to rebuke the Master for speaking of it.

Satan hates the cross and the open grave. Jesus won the victory over him there. He did not want to hear of it before it took place and used impulsive Peter for a mouthpiece to object. He doesn't want to hear about it now and uses many a skillful and gifted preacher to speak against it. "The offense of the cross" (Gal. 5:11) has never ceased. III. Consecrated Life and Service

(vv. 34-38). "Let him deny himself" (v. 34). That command we have construed to mean that we should perform lit-tle acts of self-denial, foregoing some comfort or pleasure, possibly for a few weeks. It does not mean that at all-but does mean the renouncing of self and self-will, and a complete yielding to God's will. Likewise, to take up one's cross does not mean to bear some of life's little disagreeable experiences; it means again to die to self and to live for Christ. Careful attention should be given to the solemn questions asked and statements made in verses 35-37. These are not the reasonings of a man-they fall from the lips of the Son of God. What, He asks, will you give in exchange for your soul?

Payment

How little we pay our way in life! Although we have our purses continually in our hand, the better part of service goes still unreward-

Scientists Measure And Control Vitamins For Modern Chickens

Gray Summit, Mo.-Few things are conspicuous by their absence. But vitamins are among the few that are, since a great deal of vitamin knowledge has been brought about by showing what happens when vitamins are not present. Here at the Purina Experimental Farm thousands of tests have been run on poultry of all ages. Sometimes an abundance of vitamins have been included. Other times feeds lacking in vitamins have been fed. These experiments have disclosed some interesting nutritional facts. Weak legs, poor feathering, retarded growth, bronchial troubles, poor pigmentation, lowered production, disease and infection have all been accounted for by lack of the proper vitamins in poultry favd.

Poultry Need Vitamina The most important vitamins in poultry feeding are Vitamins A. D. and G. They are most important because they are most likely not to be present in sufficient amounts to promote growth and

The process of counting or measuring vitamins is a tedious and expensive one, and only feed manufacturers equipped with complete biological laboratories, trained scientists, and plenty of animals to experiment with can make commercial use of the present-day knowledge of vitamins.

Vitamin Control New Vitamin control in poultry feeds is relatively new. Vitamins were discovered about 22 years ago, but most of the usable knowledge about them has come to the front since 1920. In 1935 Purins scientists were able to announce that a new Vitamin A concentrate had been discovered and could be efficiently and It is not enough that we stand with economically added to poultry feeds to which contains Carotene, the vegetable form of Vitamin A.

Vitamin A Essential

Vitamin A is needed by baby chicks, growing pullets, and layers. Especially do laying hens need plenty of Vitamin A to keep up production through winter months. Abundance of Vitamin A in the laying mash prevents breakdown among birds and cuts mortality among the flock. Pullets that have been grown out on a feed containing sufficient amounts of Vitamin A go into the laying house with strong, well-developed bodies and are able to keep up heavy production without breakdown and turn into extra profits for their

Vitamin D the sunshine vitamin, is absolutely necessary if hens are kept indoors. For baby chicks as much as 30 units of Vitamin D per every 100 grams of feed must be given for proper bone development and growth. The best known source of Vitamin D for poultry feeds is cod liver oil, the same source recommended for humans. The finest through assay tests on live animals. grade of cod liver oil the world produces is used in Purina poultry mashes. Each shipment is tested through assay tests on both white rats and chicks before it is put into feeds going into the checker-

Vitamin G Now Added Most recent of the vitamin discoveries is Vitamin G, which plays an important part in hatchability. Purina laying and breeding mashes contain a sufficient amount of Vitamin G to cut down losses from eggs that don't hatch. Vitamin G is measured in the Purina Laboratories by use of a new instrument, the Flavometer. This instrument was developed by two Purina scientists and is used to determine the Vitamin G content in feed.

Gray Summit Mo.—Five years ago Purina Research men began a series of tests to learn how a cow should be conditioned during the dry period for easier calving. In working on this problem related discoveries of even greater importance were made. It was found that cows conditioned for easier calving through experimental management and feeding methods increased their milk flow from 10 to 25 percent the following lactation period. The result is today's dry cow program recommended by all Purina feed

International Relations

ANY eminent people in the M political and economic spheres have for years been endeavoring to place before a waiting and anxious world constructive ideas for establishing friendly international relations on a secure and practical basis. But, so far, none of the material methods which have been experimented with have succeeded in breaking down the fear of aggression, or the thoughts of bitterness in the human heart. That these fundamental errors need to be overcome is certain, if the world is to experience the lasting peace and prosperity which humanity has so long desired.

That there is a sure way of solving this most important of all world problems is unquestionable, since there is no unsolvable difficulty. The Apostle John in profound yet simple language, which a child can understand, clearly shows us this way. Tenderly he pleads (1 John 4:7, 8), Beloved, let us love one another: for love is of God; and every one that loveth is born of God, and knoweth God. He that leveth not knoweth not God; for God is love."

Some may say that love is all very well in its very intimate place between friends and relatives, but of what effectual use is it between nations? Further, it is sometimes argued that ideals, ambitions, and characteristics vary so widely in each country, that it is impossible for even the closest neighbor to understand another nation's differing needs and aims, and how to deal with them.

But are we not conclusively told that love, understood in its relation ; to Love, God, can overcome all barriers, and form that lasting link necessary for world peace? It is the unselfish desires and united aims of men which break down the temporary obstacles of language and material tradition. In the first century of the Christian era Paul discerned this fact, for he wrote, "Whether there be prophecies, they shall fail; whether there be tongues, they shall cease; whether there be knowledge. it shall vanish away." But "charity [love] never faileth" (I Corinthians

Mary Baker Eddy, the Discoverer and Founder of Christian Science, writes on page 340 of "Science and Health with Key to the Scriptures": 'One infinite God, good, unifies men and nations; constitutes the brotherhood of man; ends wars; fulfils the Scripture, 'Love thy neighbor as thyself: annihilates pagan and Christian Christian Science Monitor.

idolatry,—whatever is wrong in so-cial, civil, criminal, political, and religious codes; equalizes the sexes; annuls the curse on man, and leaves nothing that can sin, suffer, be punished or destroyed."

Since the knowledge that God, divine Love, is indeed the Father of all, foreshadows the gloriously library libra erating effects mentioned in this illuminating passage, it is not impracticable, but divinely potent and na-tural. This broader realization of true brotherhood, wherein each one seeks his own progress in the good of another, because all are brethren, will in due course solve every national and international problem relating to frontiers, colonies, and economic supplies. When in a human family there are discontent, lack of affection, and a general disregard for the progress marble appeared as an important and welfare of each member, it is easy to see that the whole structure Their use in Italy most probably of that family's success and well-being is liable to totter. Thus it should be with the great universal family—the brotherhood of nations. Each one should work for the general good, realizing that all the children of God have their rightful place in the divine plan, wherein there is fullest liberty, progress, and true prosperity for all. Since God is good, good is inexhaustible and permanent, and is given in equal measure to all by the loving Father. But in order that boundless good may be fully utilized for the benefit of every nation, man must be clearly understood as not material and imperfect, embodying mortal passions and hatreds, but as wholly spiritual and perfect, the reflection of God and the embodiment of all right ideas. When love, reflecting the divine, governs the hearts of men and is practised in daily life, every human difficulty will be dissolved. The full understanding of the ever-presence of divine Love is destined to dispel all sense of discord, whether of an individual or a collective nature, banish fear and distrust, and put an end to political intrigue and the desire for alliances and counteralliances. As humanity wakens to recognize "one Father with His universal family, held in the gospel of Love" (ibid., p 577), good will and lasting peace will be established on earth .- The

Young Coats Styled to Perfection | SMART FOOTWEAR IS DICTUM FOR SPRIN

WHETHER she has attained the ripe old age of four years or is tottering on the verge of her ble-breasted front closing. teens, this year's smart members of the younger set will find that their new wool coats for spring reflect the same interesting fashion trends as on collar and cuffs but as decorative those of their chic mamas. With the finishings on flap pockets and other is important throughout the whole spring picture, fine lightweight woolens-notably the lustrous cheviots, smooth tailor-minded worsteds and shade of pink lightweight wool with fine men's-wear flannels in the very new velveteen collar facing, popular navy blue, also the now-somatched to navy composition flowmodish neutral shades plus a long list of beguiling pastels-are designed on cunning flattering lines breast pockets are decorative and fashionable.

In tune with the dressmaker styling which prevails in this season's silk facings are used to enliven dark tailored wear, the newer wool coats coats for the very young. Fitted and flared is the attractively tailored town coat in navy wool but severe. Smart princess silhouettes, so charmingly adaptable to flannel pictured above to the left in childish figures, are to be found in double-breasted models with lapels collar and pocket flaps. Important for trimming detail is the use of pliable colored leather which may be either in suede or smooth finish. The adorable youngster centered in the foreground of the illustration has on as fetching a leather-trimmed coat as you will see anywhere in the spring style parade. For this attractive doublebreasted model stitched leather at the neck and pockets provides a smart red accent to red-flecked neutral wool tweed.

A leather trimmed coat is also shown to the right in the group. The leather, smooth in finish and allover stitched, is charming in a

By CHERIE NICHOLAS

Marie Antoinette and Madame Pompadour are the inspiration for the new velvet accents. It is from them that the bows, the ribbons and the yelvet trimmings of all types that are so popular this spring, stem. The tercentenary of the birth of Louis XVI will be recalled in France this spring, and unless all plans go awry, many of the famous fetes of his reign will be re-enacted. Maria Theresa entered Paris in 1660. This will probably have its effect on fall fashions and we will see a perpetuation of a fad that will then become a fashion. Certainly a velvet collar on a suit, velvet bows or velvet bodices, velvet ribbon trimmed flounces, make interesting details. Millinery is again millinery, and velvet ribbons, flowers, crowns, brims, as well as bonnets, cloches, tiny berets and turbans always flourish when women are wearing "hats as is hats."

Reds and Corals Lead in Colors in New Fashions

The gamut of geranium reds and coral tones, shading into pale blotting paper pink, take first place in colors shown in one French collection recently. The prominence of pink is even noticeable in tartans, in which soft tones of pink are combined with vivid green or yellow.

Purples, fuchsia red and soft "flax" blues are given importance, and the burnt tones from ochre yellow to brick red are emphasized. New greens are confined to turquoise shades.

Color Enlivens Hat Color rises as colorful hats become more and more popular. A pill-box of deep ruby velvet has its cuff trimmed with tiny humming birds in green and blue.

Styles Reveal the Foot in New and Taking Ways.

By CHERIE NICHOLAS
Spring trends in footgear indicate an "out and out" season for polished toes. Draped lines, dressmaker detail, ribbon effects knotted over instep and ankle, all contrive to reveal the foot in new and taking wavs.

Another interesting departure in Mrs. Florence Wagner and children, color is the gray shoe that "goes Oak Park, visited Sunday with Mrs. with everything," done in shades of Wagner's brother, Don Winn, at the over the instep. Softly draped folds crossing the toes are worked in leather almost as often as in crepe. In the majority of new models, open effects are not confined to toes alone, and the more varied the exposure of the foot, the more definitely is the shoe marked for 1938. If it doesn't look gay, it's an old-fashioned foot!

STRIPE JEWELRY By CHERIE NICHOLAS

a variation of pretty blouses such The rage for stripes extends into every nook and crook of fashiondom. Now it's our costume jewelry that has gone striped! The new Seminole-stripe costume jewelry is one of the cleverest adaptations of stripes we've seen. Inspired by the vivid stripes that are identified with the garb of the Seminole Indians, this jewelry gives that dramatic dash of color to the dark dress (equally effective with white and light colored frocks) that fashion declares must be this season. The various pieces, bracelet, brooch and clips, plus a girdle clasp that repeats the motif of the bracelet, depicts half-inch diagonal stripes of black, gold orange, red, green and pink, lacquered on solid white catalin. See its effectiveness as the brilliant stripes contrast the black daytime dress sketched above. The young woman in the oval inset varies the mode by wearing her catalin stripe pieces, one clip in the hair, another on her bodice with wide bracelet to match.

Use Salt Deposits Salt deposits not many miles east of Hot Springs National park, Ark., are known to have been worked by the Indians before the early white settlers used them as a source of their salt. Numerous fragments of pottery found at these locales indicate the importance of earthen pots in the collecting of this valuable food substance.

PUBLIC SERVICE SHOWS BIG GAIN FOR YEAR 1937

Net income of Public Service Company of Northern Illinois for 1937, after all charges and taxes, including surtax on undistributed profits, was $4,703,997, equal, after preferred dividend requirements, to $5.53 a share on the outstanding common stock, according to the Company's Annual Report issued this week. These figures compare with net income of $3,739,330, or $4.16 a share on common stock, in the preceding year.

Total operating revenues for 1937 were $41,679,099 against $39,231,289 in 1936, or an increase of 6.2%.

Total operating expenses and taxes increased $1,868,000. The increase in operating expenses resulted chiefly from the cost of generating more kilowatt hours of electricity and from wage increases. Total tax provisions for 1937 amounted to $4,740,515, compared with $4,127,116 for 1936. The Company in 1937 continued its aggressive sales promotion policy and, in addition to its own appliance sales, actively engaged in the promotion of sales by dealers. Total kilowatt hours sales of electricity for the year increased approximately 7% over 1936. Electricity sold to residential and rural customers increased almost 14%. The average annual kilowatt hours consumption of electricity was 840 in 1937, compared with 762 in 1936, an increase of more than 10%. Total sales of gas last year amounted to 137,541,000 therms, conspared with 105,500,000 therms in 1936, or an increase of 30%.

The Annual Report points out that although results for 1937 were satisfactory, the outlook for at least the first quarter of 1938 is less favorable. There has been a considerable slackening of industrial activity in the territory served by the Company, and furthermore, the Company must pay a 3% State public utility tax this year which was not in effect from January 1 to and other miscellaneous items will add March 10, 1937. If the 3% tax had been in effect for the entire year of 1937, it would have increased the levy by about $260,000. The Company serves 305,000 electric customers and 158,000 gas customers throughout a territory of approximately 6,000 square miles in the northeastern portion of Illinois outside of the city of Chicago. In this territory are a total of 347 communities served by electricity, 107 with gas, 4 with water most successful stage presentation the League require that it shall be and 2 with heat.

KELSEY FAVORS $5 LICENSE FEE FOR ALL ILLINOIS AUTOS

Pointing out that the Illinois motorists poured about $50,000,000.00 into the state treasury last year, Harold D. Kelsey, for State Representative, of Lake County stated today that he intends to push a bill for the relief of motorists in the next session of the general assembly, if elected. Kelsey is inclined to favor a flat rate of $5.00 for a license fee and intends to embody this in a bill to be presented at the next session. Although a Republican, Kelsey is certain of Democratic support along this line, for Secretary of State Edward J Hughes, a Democrat, recently stated that something must be done to lighten the automobile owner is forced to pay is too great in the opinion of Secretary Hughes.

$5.00 a Fair Figure Kelsey believes that a $5.00 license fee for all types of cars would be quitable. The lowest now is $6.50, not including a 50 cent fee for certificate of

Five dollars for a light car or a heavy car would be equitable in the opinion of Kelsey, because the heavier car would use more gasoline and thus make up the difference through paying more into the motor fuel tax. The automboile owner pays more than any other person to support the government in the state and nation. Last year his bill in Illinois was about $50,000,000.00, which according to figures presented by the Secretary of State, show it is more than one-third of the entire revenue received by the state, Kelsey said.

Funds Aplenty The bill for gasoline tax, Kelsey declared, ranges close to $30,000,000.60. a sufficient sum in itself. The registration fees plus the motor fuel tax fund added to the federal aid will give the state nearly $50,000,000.00. Fines another $250,000.00. This, in the opinion of Kelsey, is unreasonable, excessive and far out of proportion. The automobile owner, in his opinion, too long has been the target when revenues are needed and can almost claim discrimination in comparison with other items of taxation.

Say Bolger Will Repeat Basking in the favor of the Horner administration, Representative Thomas A. Bolger of McHenry is believed to head the list of eligibles on the Democratic primary ticket. Bolger's opponent in his home county is Charles F. Hayes, railroad man of Harvard, while the other four aspirants hail from Lake county. They are: Thomas J. Keefe, of Ingleside; Joseph H. Jadrich, North Chicago lawyer; Einar Sorenson, Antioch, and Edward T. Leonard Cummings avenues on April 8, last offices in 1800. of Lake Villa. Political opponents of year, she was struck by an automobile Bolger are reported to be turning to the burden of the motorist. The bill the candidacy of Jadrich, who is proseis said to have the support of the Kelly-Nash machine that seeks to extend its influence into Lake county. All things considered, it may be that Jadrich will muster a winning vote, but the old timers are inclined to believe that no opponent will be able to unseat the veteran Bolger, who like Francis, has the approval of the Legislative Voters League.

What of "The League"? Whatever may be the influence of the Legislative Voters League endorsements in the coming primaries, it was pointed out today by a veteran politician that the League has been quite noted in the past for having endorsed losing candidates and having withheld approval of those who won. Notable among these are Representative Richard J. Lyons and Representative Nick Keller, neither of whom had the League's endorsement the first time they ran. Both were successful at the polls. After he was elected Lyons had the League's approval each successive campaign. Before taking the League's endorsement too seriously, voters might inquire who constitutes the "Legislative Voters League of Illinois?" On the title page of the current publication appears the names of 29 persons listed as officers and directors, but to this date the writer has never contacted and has never heard of another person who is a member. Perhaps, as one voter opines, it is a "closed corporation."

While the "Purpose of the League" as set forth in the Bulletin is laudable, it would be most interesting to know just what the League members lobby for at Springfield. "The By-laws of Cornetist Needs Good Teeth Good, straight teeth (even false ones) are necessary for cornet playing. The instrument is pressed against the lips and cuts them if the teeth are crooked. Soloist in a military band, the cornet corresponds to the first violin of an orchestra, the "soprano" of the brasses. It's also the most "agile" brass instrument, capable of executing a fast piece of music.
